Concert Series

Choir, Drama Opera Planned For Winter

During the Winter Quarter, the Mercer family will be able to witness the performance of three great concerts; part of the 1969-70 Mercer University Concert Series.

The first concert will feature the world's most beloved choir, Vienna Choir Boys, in a concert of sacred music, folk songs, and costume operettas, on Tuesday, January 20, 1970, at 8:00 p.m.

The beguiling freshness, charm, and artistry of the Vienna Choir Boys have won them multitudes of admirers and made them the most beloved choir ever to tour America. Founded more than 450 years ago, the choir has had its repertoire enriched by such composers as Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Liszt and Bruckner. Today, as through nearly five centuries, this great tradition is still upheld and the choir provides enchanting entertainment with its unique programs of costumed operettas, sacred songs, secular and folk music.

All concerts will be held in Willingham Chapel. All members of the university family — trustees, administrators, staff and students — will be admitted without charge upon showing their student identification card. All others may purchase tickets at the College Store in the Connell Student Center, or by mail.

The third and final concert of the Winter Quarter, happens when the Goldovsky Grand Opera Theater presents Verdi's immortal, romantic, masterpiece "La Traviata", a must for those who love and enjoy a thrilling evening of grand opera. One of the most familiar and universally beloved of all grand operas will be brought to Macon in a stunning new production for everyone to understand and enjoy, when the Goldovsky Grand Opera Theater presents Verdi's "La Traviata" at the Willingham Chapel here on Monday, February 16, 1970, at 8:00 P.M. in the course of its fifteenth cross-country tour.

The Vienna Choir Boys' concert will be followed by William Shakespeare's "King Lear", which will be presented on Friday, January 23, 1970, at 8:00 P.M., in the Willingham Chapel, by National Players, International repertory company from Washington, D. C. All the fire and color and sweep of the greatest English playwright's most majestic tragedy have been caught in the handsomely mounted new production by National Players.

National Players is an operation of University Players — a non-profit theatrical cooperation. The repertory of National Players includes works of Shakespeare, Sophocles, Shaw, Aeschylus, Aristophanes, Moliere and Christopher Fry — the greatest playwrights of the world. In an ever-expanding repertory, new titles are constantly being added while at the same time revivals are being brought back by popular demand.

complacent students into taking an interest in our society's problems." The reexamining of educational priorities and a commitment to programs of community service are by-products of unrest, Dr. Harris said.

But "students now face the obligation of proving that they are responsible and mature... If our higher educational system is endangered, responsible faculty, alumni and trustees, with the help of students, should be allowed to handle the threat in their fashion, work out their differences and resolve their problems. If they are not permitted to do this, the colleges will disintegrate."
