

Aunt Agatha's Advice To The Lovelorn

Dear Aunt Agatha:
Seeing your column in the Cluster last week made me so happy, because since I've been in college I haven't known anybody to advise me in my little troubles. I am certain that a woman of your standing and past experience can help me heaps. I understand you used to live in a seaport town and had several sailor sweethearts. I wouldn't bother you with my troubles but I must have some advice. You see I'm a freshman co-ed and have been failing in my work. I am what the boys call "powerful" and some of them call me a "Lulu." Should I vamp the professors in order to secure good grades? Honest, I don't want to ruin a happy home, but I think I should strive to make a good grade even at that cost. Please answer in the next edition of the Cluster because final exams are not far off.

URA SÖFILTHY.

I always appreciate the kind words and confidences of my readers. Always bring your troubles to me and I will do my best to help solve them.

If living in a seaport town and having sailors for sweethearts has anything to do with your problem, I am afraid Aunt Agatha can't give you much advice, for she is not just a sailor's sweetheart.

Having been a co-ed myself long years ago, I can understand your situation perfectly. Maybe the fact that you are so powerful with the boys accounts for your failure in your school work. Love and books are not compatible. It would be a bad plan for Lulu to break up a professor's happy home. Try another method, for if you buy good grades at such a price they will be as dust and ashes in your mouth.

Answer To Mercorian

It would take a Scotland Yard detective to discover your identity, Mercorian, because each fact you give about yourself only draws closer the veil of mystery in which you persist in shrouding yourself. For reasons of the above-mentioned type, I cannot give you my usual sufficient help.

I can give you one principle of human life, however, that may turn your thoughts in the right direction. Although it seems hardly fair to get information from her side to your side, you will have to ask if she really loves you. Now for the principle:

Remember, a woman generally says "no" first, with the firmest intentions of changing it to "yes" at some later date. Don't hurry her because it may take a little time for her to forget entirely the man who formerly occupied your place in her affections.

and definite announcements are expected within the next few days. Later on in the spring another trip will be made into the northern and eastern part of the state and then several week-end trips are being planned for towns nearby.

The club this year is perhaps the best in the history of Mercer and bids fair to become the most popular in this section of the southland. The success of the program at Cochran has done much to help the club and the program Saturday in Milledgeville is expected to be even better.

chairman of the convention and president of the Mercer board of trustees, made his report to the convention.

Dr. Acquilla Chamlee, president of Bessie Tift college, urged that all Baptists in the state get behind Mercer in her centennial drive. He advocated that helping Mercer would help the cause of all Baptist schools in the state.

Robert M. Hitch, Savannah attorney, made a full statement of Mercer's financial condition. This was followed by a report from the committee of fourteen, who said that an all-state Baptist Campaign was the only way out of the financial difficulties experienced by the university.

Bessie Tift college, Shorter, Brewton-Parker institute, and Norman Junior college all yielded their allotted time to Mercer. The committee on finances drew up their recommendations for a concerted drive of all Baptists in the state to aid Mercer secure $2,500,000. This was adopted by the convention Wednesday, November 19.

Dr. Dowell Praises Work

"The progress and unanimity of the meeting were unaparalleled in the history of the convention," said Dr. Dowell, referring to the work of the convention. "Every member of the body was enthusiastic; and the action of the convention shows that all of the Baptists in the state are behind Mercer."

Group Promises $5,000,000

A group of capitalists, whose names were not divulged, promised to contribute $5,000,000 provided the drive nets as much as $2,500,000, according to Dr. Dowell.

The members of endowment committee are: Mills B. Lane, Savannah banker; Howard E. Coffin, Detroit capitalist and developer of Saplo Island, Georgia; W. C. Bradley, Columbus manufacturer; Eugene Stetson, and Gordon S. Reichler, New York bankers.

The committee of finances are: Hugh M. Willet, Atlanta; Dr. J. C. Wilkinson, Athens, chairman of the executive committee of state convention; J. W. Merritt, Atlanta, executive secretary of the convention; Dr. O. P. Gilbert, Atlanta, editor of The Christian Index; Dr. J. E. Sammons, Macon, president of the Mercer alumni association.

Mrs. W. J. Neel, Cartersville, president of the State Women's Missionary Union; Dr. W. G. Lee, Macon, J. M. Harrison, Atlanta; Dr. Louie D. Newton, Atlanta; Rev. Mr. H. M. Melton, Norman Park; Rev. Mr. Hoke Shirley, West Point; and Rev. Mr. Willis E. Howard, Waynesboro.

game could be arranged with Army for the 1932 season, but the cadet schedule was arranged before final plans could be completed. However the West Point authorities favor a game with the Bears and have asked that a game for 1933 be arranged, if the schools can make the necessary arrangements.

A large number of Mercer's present varsity which has just completed a most brilliant season, will be seniors in 1933, and it is expected that the team will reach its peak in that season. Coach Lake Russell is looking forward to this and is arranging a schedule worthy of the team, and the greatest menu in the history of the Orange and Black.

The 1931 edition of the Bears was the most successful in the history of modern Mercer football, defeating Erskipe, Citadel, Stetson, Presbyterian, Wofford, Birmingham-Southern, and Oglethorpe, all by decisive scores, tying John Carroll in Cleveland, Ohio, and being defeated by Centre and Chattanooga in very close games.

IN SCORELESS GAME

Mercer line held and Lanier punted. Thus the first quarter started and ended by both teams trying futilely to break through the impregnable line of their opponents, and neither getting anywhere.

The second period was the most exciting of the contest and made the Lanier players and fans feel uneasy until the fifteen minutes ended. It was in this period that the freshmen advanced the ball deep into the Poet's territory several times, only to lack the punch to carry it over. Once the pigskin went as far as the four yard line and again to the eight, but after getting there try after try proved useless as the Lanier line repulsed the best the backs of Mercer seemed to offer. The collegians kept the ball in the shadow of Lanier's goal practically the entire second quarter and it is here that we pause to honor the Orange and Green line in stopping the grizzly cubs attack.

The third and fourth periods were on the order of the first, neither team making any headway against the other. It was a fly to the finish, and the game ended with both teams exhausted in having tried many without

... no bamboozlin' about that!"

SURE! When a word fits, you know it! "Satisfy" just fits CHESTERFIELD. A smoker picks up a package, and he likes its neat appearance — no heavy inks or odors from ink. That satisfies him.

Then he examines a Chesterfield. It is well-filled; it is neat in appearance; the paper is pure white. And that satisfies him.

He lights up. At the very first puff he likes the flavor and the rich aroma. He decides that it tastes better — neither raw nor over-sweet; just pleasing and satisfying. Then he learns it is milder. That's another way of saying that there is nothing irritating about it. And again he's satisfied!

Satisfy — they've got to satisfy! The right tobaccos, the CHESTERFIELD kind, cured and aged, blended and cross-blended, to a taste that's right. Everything that goes into CHESTERFIELD is the best that money can buy and that science knows about. CHESTERFIELDS do a complete job of it. They Satisfy!
