UNIVERSITIES NOW GIVE JOURNALISM

Miss Garner Speaks to Students at Chapel Tuesday.

There are 170 universities and colleges having courses in journalism, and 276 journalism teachers in these schools in the United States, according to Miss Virginia Garner, who addressed the student body Tuesday morning. Miss Garner's talk was in the nature of a report of the proceedings of the convention of the American Association of Teachers of Journalism held at Madison, Wis., recently.

The speaker stated that of the ten women journalism teachers five were in attendance at the convention this year, Miss Garner being the only woman present until last year when one other woman journalistic instructor joined her for the meeting. "Most of the topics discussed," said Miss Garner, "were on methods of teaching journalism. Four questions were asked and discussed. They were, How can a college avoid unpleasant publicity? How secure space in the local newspapers? How secure the co-operation of the college president and faculty? Should a college paper tend to humor in writing news about the faculty? We here at Mercer have no difficulty with these problems."

Mercer University was ranked as an "A" college in journalism by one of the leading teachers in journalism, according to the speaker. Some of the larger universities were ranked as "B" and some as low as "C." The supreme thought of the convention, she said, was to secure a proper ethical attitude on the part of students of journalism.

The speaker stated that the student should not be content to get a piece of news by a city editor, but should strive to write in a manner to get news by the BEST city editor.

PILOT CLUB HITS SYNCOPATED SNAG

Freshman Pharr Brings Relaxation to "Tired Business Women."

Speaking of "long-faced" preachers, read the following and see if a preacher can't really be a human being. As an entertainer Marvin Pharr, new ministerial student, is one of the best. The last episode of Pharr was Tuesday night when the Pilot Club, composed of young women of this city, gave a banquet at the Dempsey Hotel. Pharr was invited.

Just a little history here will explain. Pharr had been invited on previous occasions to attend the banquets given by this club and had accepted their invitations. Last Tuesday he was called upon to entertain the club at the piano. Well, all Mercer boys know what Pharr can do with a musical instrument of this description. He surpassed himself, holding the attention of the club members for forty-five minutes. Before the musical notes had died away Pharr was extended another invitation to attend the next banquet. He accepted, of course.

Walter C. McMillan, Senior law student, became champion checker player of Mercer when he defeated F. R. Nalls, Jr., former titleholder, three out of four games Wednesday afternoon at the Checker Club.

The games were close and hard fought. Before the winner could be picked, eight games were played, four of them draws. The new champion won three, while Nalls was able to annex only one. Time required, one hour, ten minutes.

The results of the recent tournament held at Mercer are as follows: McMillan, first place and champion; Nalls, second place; Charlie Wasden, third.

PHI DELTA SOCIETY HOLDS HOT DEBATE

Publicity Committee for Society Day Program is Chosen.

Debating the question, "Resolved, that the modern tendency in government towards direct action by the people is not advisable," the affirmative believers, C. E. Bryson, W. A. Bootle and R. L. Brantley, took the measure of the negative expounders, J. A. Ruffian, O. R. Harding and D. T. Buice, in a hotly contested affair on Monday evening, in the Phi Delta Society hall. Several of the debaters proved themselves to be well read historians and promulgated all sorts of ancient dogma concerning the lives of great men and notable happenings, and strange to say, it all had a more or less bearing on the subject under discussion. Some grew noticeably eloquent, while others soared to acroplanic heights and brought the house down with them in the descent.

The coming society day program was discussed and several new committees were appointed to function in preparation of the great day. Among these committees was one which bids fair to promote the society to a great extent along the publicity line. In fact, the committee was named the Publicity Committee. O. K. Webb was chosen to head this new organization, while Ruffian and Jelks were named his assistants.

THE PREMIERE

Adam stared at his wife in amazement.

"For Crap's sakes, Eve, what's the matter?" he demanded.

"I don't know," she gasped. "My head—how funny it feels!"

There were tears in her eyes; her breath came irregularly.

"Ah—ah—ah—" Eve groaned.

Adam became desperate. "Eve, what—what is it? Are you in pain? Speak to me!"

"Ah—" was all she could say, then: "Ah—ah—ah—chew!"

The first sneeze was achieved.

Brantley: "It takes me fifteen minutes to dress."

Nalls: "It only takes me ten."

Brantley: "But I wash!"
