...that satisfactory after some murmuring.

We chatted the young man in some time that I could begin when I had those that there were no indications, but no presiding officer. We chatted some more and I started into my speech.

The speaker ended. I stopped. There was a brief interval of conversation in which the members asked questions about my speech. A young man reached for a book on a shelf, took down the coffee pot and hitched it to a string light. While it boiled and bubbled we talked on.

Coffee Percolates

The coffee-making young man said to a comrade. Is the verdict satisfactory?

"The verdict is satisfactory, Comrade," replied the other.

I thought they were talking about the coffee, but it was my speech they were discussing. In some strange and secret fashion they had taken a vote. Perhaps it depended upon the number of minutes required for the coffee to start percolating.

Two members rose from their chairs, moved aside an old filing box and in a secretive manner covered something with a large handkerchief. They presented me with a trophy. The nature of the reward cannot be revealed for the Dictum Club must have some secrets left.

The organization of the club was perfected Jan. 23, this year, on the occasion of the birthday of a law student when a group of his friends cut classes to serve him a birthday cake and ice cream cones at the drug store across from the campus. Nobody knows who thought it up but each member gives credit to the other.

and they have pins. The insignium the varsity crew will be staged here with Mehlenburg, college of Pennsylvania on April 20. The Pi Kappa Delta question will be debated. The team met Alabama Polytechnic institute (Auburn) in a non-decision affair last night in Roberts chapel.

The freshman team, composed of Clyde Calhoun, Leon Garfield, Harold Edwards, and Sam Lowe, completed its schedule yesterday afternoon. They met Auburn's freshman squad in a non-decision debate in Robert's chapel. The Mercer representatives took the negative side of the question; Resolved that all electric utilities should be governmentally owned and operated. The freshmen have debated Gordon and Middle Georgia college during their schedule.

Even though they don't consider it "quite lady-like" to smoke pipes in public, five Ohio State University comrades claim to enjoy corn-cob and briar pipes in their own sanctums.

"We selected that because it was the only pin the dime store had enough to go around," explained one Comrade.

HERBERT AMES

During the past eight years, Sir Herbert has four times revisited Geneva. His summer of 1932 was spent in an especial study of the situation in North Central Europe. In the autumn of 1932 he visited Austria, Hungary, Roumania, and Yugo Slayia, meeting and interviewing most of the leading statesmen of this area.

Since 1929, Sir Herbert has cooperated with the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace under whose sponsorship he is at present making a lecture tour of the Southern colleges. He has visited and lectured in all the Canadian colleges and in over one hundred and fifty American schools.

All of Sir Herbert Ames's appearances in Macon are being sponsored by the International Relations Clubs of Mercer and Wesleyan.

Most of the cards state the graduate's present occupation, and there is a movement on foot to organize re-union groups by trades and professions.
