BRAZIL STUDENT IS SOCIETY DEBATER

Three Freshmen representing the negative side of the question, "Resolved, that Mrs. Felton should be allowed to hold the Senatorial chair until March 4th," won the unanimous decision of the judges over the first-year men, Dunston, Baugh and Dodson, who championed the affirmative of the question, in the Phi Delta Hall Monday evening.

In fighting for their side of the question the affirmative speakers brought out the sterling qualities of the "grand old woman of Georgia" and gave some interesting argument why women should be recognized and honored, whereas the basis of the negative's argument had to do with the constitutionality of the question.

Dunston, who came all the way from Brazil to study at Mercer University, made three interesting points in his discussion, his third being a call for the second speaker to come forth.

Several new members were added and showed that they know something of the fundamental principles of debating. This with their society spirit will no doubt bring out many new orators of note this year, and unless Southern colleges have improved to a very considerable extent over last year, Mercer is destined to keep her undefeated record unbroken.

There is considerable agitation among the members of the society for the return of the State Oratorical Contest, which was in vogue several years ago. Such a contest would be welcome by the Mercer students and would stimulate those oratorically inclined. L. E. Smith.

A TOAST

I drink, and unabated, With soul and heart inflated With love! A passionate love! To her whose watchword "duty," Enwraps her soul in beauty, Like that which shines above.

I drink to the fleeting years, Of joys, of hopes, of fears; For to me there is none other. So I drink, and unabated, With soul and heart inflated, To her—my mother.

"Still hanging around, I see," remarked the sheriff to the man on the scaffold.

Could it be said that the Sophomores received their reward in the end?

Concerning Ye Modern Dress

Looks to us like the Blue Law enthusiasts and self-appointed promoters of public morals would pass a law or something to abolish the present style of long dresses. One has to take too big a chance nowadays with the present style and any little boy or girl on the back row knows that taking a chance is gambling.

Knickerbockers are the only sensible clothes for the women. The girls may look shorter in them, but the men look longer.

Frank Knowles, ertwhile light-weight champion mit-slinger of South Georgia, dropped into our boudoir Sunday A. M. and imparted to us the information that "the fairer sex is condemning boxing at the present on account of its brutality, but I like the prize-ring a darn sight better than the wedding ring." Come again, Franklin.

Well, stay shy of this here Den-gay person and don't forget to keep your nose clean.

DEAN BRADLEY TALKS

The second faculty member made an oratorical debut before the students Tuesday morning when Dr. W. Bradley, dean of the School of Commerce, spoke in the chapel.

One faculty member speaks every Tuesday at chapel and this opportunity will be accorded them not more than once this year on account of the increased number on the faculty roll.
