

Art Exhibits Seen In Connell Center

The American Scene Between the Wars, an exhibition selected by Alfred H. Barr, director of collections at the Museum of Modern Art, will open at Mercer University on October 7, and remain on review until October 31.

The exhibition is prepared and circulated by the Museum of Modern Art in New York City. It is made possible by the CBS Foundation Inc. and support of the Student Activities Board of Mercer.

On exhibit all this week until this evening is a selection of current work by the members of the Wesleyan Art department. This exhibit features works by Monte B. Morrison, James M. Kelly and Robert R. Malone. Pictured on the left is an example of this art form entitled "The Old Soldier."

The thirty-four paintings by thirty-one artists will be on display in the Connell Student Center. This exhibition will follow the one put on by the members of the Wesleyan Art Department. The exhibition is adapted from one originally shown at The Museum of Modern Art during the Spring of 1961. All paintings are from the museum collections and include paintings by such painters as Beman, Breinin, Cervantez, Guglielmi and Levine. Many of the paintings were painted on the WPA and are on extended loan to the Museum of Modern Art.

Miss Lucile Blanch, artist-in-residence at Mercer, will give a gallery talk at 4:00 on Sunday October 7. The talk will include personal reminiscences of many of the artists and of the period from 1916 to 1914.

This exhibition is the first of a group of exceptional shows to be presented at Mercer from the Museum of Modern Art and the Smithsonian Institution during the 1962-63 academic year.

Marshall Daugherty, chairman of the Mercer Art Department, said, "We are pleased to offer Mercer students and the people of Macon an opportunity to view important works by many of the foremost artists of the United States."
